I like to join different words, ideas and physical elements that will work together to tell one story. It's not my intention or goal to move you or cause a reaction through art. Nor do I want to be responsible for causing you to think about any art in a way that is unnatural to you. All I ask, is as you look at my art, just listen to what comes to your mind. If you are interested in taking home "Something Defined" write me a poem, and it's yours.

I enjoy exploring the use of different medias in two-dimensional visual art. I am struck by the fleeting beauty or social commentary found in life's ordinary moments. My struggle to capture these moments is portrayed in my pieces.

Painting a landscape, still life or portrait is similar to reading a really good book for me. I am very excited to find a subject I'm passionate about, can't wait to start, hate to put it down, struggle at times with the (visual) language, and when it's done-I can't wait until the next one!

I have been painting for many years. I have been fortunate to show in some truly auspicious galleries and state museums around the world. It has been community galleries and local places where I have lived that have provided me with the best venues. The reason for this is that art is for everyone and can be done by anyone and should be out there to be seen. I hope I inspire you in some way, enjoy!
